Welcome to you, beloved visitor. I have separated this brief writing from the other contents so as not to interrupt too much your experience. Since the raw concept of the Cryptodruid came to my mind, his travel has been extraordinary, and despite having cost me several sleepless nights now I am glad to have given life, form and soul to this amazing character. Of course, the whole thing should not be considered serious and it was done to give you a smile or three. Before leaving your navigation, I would like to thank my brother and my loved ones for the support they have shown me. Now is the time for me to return into the shadows, and to let you continue your personal journey. Ronan's story has just begun, and I promise you news will not be lacking. There is still much to discover about the Cryptodruid, and I hope you will enjoy reading his adventures at least as much as I enjoyed telling them.
